“ I first met Jeri at church when I moved to town. Once I met her, it seemed like I ran into her everywhere. She was doing the books for some of my favorite customers, so I got to talk to her about invoices. We reported to jury duty together - she got out, I didn't. We attended church support groups together and I started regarding her as a trusted friend. Her faith was palpable. You could feel it radiating from her.

My favorite 'Jeri Story' was when I was getting chemo in Wenatchee. I was feeling sorry for myself that day, as this was during Covid and I had no one at the hospital with me. I remember just looking at the floor and then seeing some silver high heels, open toed with perfectly manicured toenails. I kind of smiled to myself thinking who dresses up for chemo? Then I heard that voice ( If you knew Jeri, you know ) I look up to see her in a fabulous pantsuit with perfect nails, matching jewelry and a facemask (Covid). I call across the room to her and she brushes off the nurses and comes to sit with me and pray with me. From that day on, I never felt alone again during my treatments or my recovery. She was a blessing to me and she will never be forgotten. Love you!

“ I first met Geri in the 1990s while covering City Council for the Lake Chelan Mirror. I was struck by her sharp mind as well as her classic clothes. She was so skilled at financial accounting and showed utmost confidence to so many women who admired her style and class. Through the years, as her health insurance agent, I saw a kind and loving side of her. When I sold my book of business in August, I asked if I could pay her for her knowledge in selling a business. She deferred and told me a bit more about her health than what I knew earlier. She was so openly thankful for every adventure she's had. I deeply admire her. I'll miss her physical presence on earth. My deepest condolences to Al and the many others who love her. Gaylen Willett, Chelan
